

For several years, we contemplated a custom addition to our home that included an expansion of the master bedroom, a large master closet, office/sitting room, improvements to guest bathroom and remodel of master bath that would take us into our retirement years. We visited many open houses and toured homes in the annual St. Tammany Parade of Homes in search of design ideas, quality construction, and value pricing.

On an open house visit in the spring of 2008 we toured a home built by Jeff and Tammy Lassere of Welbilt Custom Homes. We were impressed with the design aesthetic, quality of materials used in construction, the appearance and the personability of the builders. They stated at that time, that they did not do renovations, but would be happy to recommend a qualified contractor. In 2011 when we considered tackling the renovation, we met with Jeff and Tammy for that list and assistance in possible designs of the project. We thought that if they couldn't do the project, at least we would have the benefit of their design expertise.

During the design process, we found them willing to listen to our needs as well as offering suggestions we might consider in the renovation process. We were certain at this point that we still wanted them to do the project and they decided, to our delight, to take on our renovation.

They worked with a team of subcontractors that were both professional and enjoyable to work with in the construction of our addition.

Jeff and Tammy are organized and hands on builder. Jeff was on the job site early every day, checking the progress and the quality of the workmanship. Tammy would periodically show up to also check the quality of the work, make change recommendations, if necessary, and provide budgetary information to us. Additionally, she and her team were invaluable in the design process. They did not hesitate to call us for clarification and updates during the construction process. Phone calls or emails made to Tammy or Jeff were promptly returned. We felt excellent communication existed between us during the building process!

Renovations of a home during the winter months can be tricky due to weather. Even with torrential rains and winter temperatures, our project was completed very close to our scheduled move in date.

Jeff and Tammy take pride in their work! They believe their homes are a reflection of their abilities as builders.

We found working with Welbilt Custom Homes such rewarding and satisfying experience; we have recommended them to close family members.
